HOWE'S TORICOID GLASSES

"TORICOID GLASSES" are spectacle and eye-glass lenses ground in a peculiar manner, so as to give a much larger, clearer field of vision than any other glasses and a sense of freedom and comfort to the wearer that no other glasses afford, and which can be appreciated only by those who have tried them. They are especially adapted for those who are afflicted with nearsightedness, farsightedness, astigmatism, and other eye troubles. They are made only by J. T. Howe & Co., Louisville, Ky., and are sold by them and their authorized agents under a patent guarantee that if they do not give satisfaction in every way they may be returned and the money paid for them will be refunded. If you have any trouble with your eyes, or if your glasses have not given you perfect comfort and satisfaction in every way, write to us about "TORICOID GLASSES"—mentioning this paper.

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 27

WON BY A YARD

By F. J. KNIGHT ADKIN

Copyright, 1906, by F. J. K. Adkin

"Yes, yes. I am perfectly willing to acknowledge that you are hardworking, honorable and trustworthy. Surely I have proved that by taking you so completely into my confidence in business matters. But that is not sufficient. The man who marries my daughter must have shown some striking evidence of business acumen before I give my consent." Mr. Brampton, banker and diamond merchant, wiped his glasses and set back in the comfortable chair of his private office, dismissing the whole matter with a wave of his hand.

Eric Wilmington, his confidential secretary, also tried to forget the matter. "Don't worry about it," he said. "He's such a self-willed old gentleman," he sighed to himself, "that if he weren't Doris' father I should call him a stubborn old fool." This heretofore train of thought was broken by the entrance of a clerk with a card. He took it. "Mr. Wilfrid Norton Harrington to see you," he said. "I don't think he's a client of ours."

"Harrington, Harrington," murmured his employer. "I don't recollect the name. Oh, yes, though I fancy you must be the son of that wealthy old Harrington of San Francisco who died a couple of months ago. I heard that the young man was going to settle in New York. Send him in," he added to the clerk.

The latter retired and presently admitted a tall, clean shaven man of about forty, dressed in a top hat and fashionably cut frock coat which did not seem to fit him.

"Mr. Brampton," he said, "I should like to transact some private business with you if you can spare the time," said the stranger.

"My secretary is entirely in my confidence," answered Mr. Brampton. "In fact, I depend on him a good deal, so you may speak quite freely."

Mr. Harrington sat down and placed a red morocco jewel case on the table. "I have no doubt you know of my father's death some two months ago, and also that I have purchased No. 15, Fifth avenue. I have my affairs pretty well settled now, but in looking over the jewelry left by my father I find that there are several things which I don't care to keep. Perhaps, for instance, my wife has a magnificent bracelet of mine which she wears them and it would be ridiculous to keep them locked up in the safe." He paused for a moment and took from the case a magnificent pair of graduated pearls. "Here is a string of 175 pearls that I am willing to dispose of."

The other two bent over him with interest; they were indeed a handsome set.

"I think I remember being notified that your father had collected them some five years ago. I sent him a few, on approval, I fancy," said Mr. Brampton, at last, jotting down a conservative estimate of $45,000 on a writing pad which he dropped in a drawer where his secretary could see the figures.

The latter took it, and wrote $50,000 beneath, and returned it.

"I have as many pearls now as I care to handle," said the banker, "but if you will put a price on these I will see if we can make a deal."

"My wife insists so strongly on my disposing of them that I have decided to let them go at a price considerably below their value," said Mr. Harrington, who had been looking at the pearls with a keen eye.

"The other two men looked at each other. "It is not a matter to be decided offhand," said Mr. Brampton, "but if you give me time for consideration, I think we can come to an agreement."

"If a few hours would be sufficient," suggested Harrington, "I should be very pleased if you would dine with us and we can settle the matter this evening."

"That is excellent," replied the banker, "and the visitor rose. "Good day."

"I suppose you would like to telegraph to San Francisco to make sure that everything is all right," said Eric when the door was closed.

"Yes, I'll wire the Pacific bank as a matter of form, but of course his receiving me in his own house will be really sufficient. Every one knows he's bought No. 8—Fifth avenue," Mr. Brampton wrote and dispatched the message immediately.

A satisfactory reply arrived before the visitor left the office. "I have had removed a considerable amount of jewelry from that very bank to his New York house about a fortnight ago."

"I can conclude this purchase satisfactorily if it will mean a considerable turn over," said the banker as he left the office. "You lack real business instincts, Wilmington, in being too cautious. I know you didn't like this man's appearance, and you would have let the matter drop, very like."

"I shall be anxious to hear what kind of an understanding you come to this evening," said Eric.

At 10 o'clock next morning Mr. Brampton arrived at the office in an excellent frame of mind. "I have bought the pearls for $55,000," he said as he hung up his hat. "Those Harringtons are charming people, of course I was the only guest, as they are still in mourning."

"How did you like the lady of the house?" asked Eric.

"She seemed very fine woman, but just a trifle common. I thought she spoke with a slightly foreign accent, but I may have been mistaken. She seemed very anxious to get rid of the pearls, said they always brought her bad luck, or some such foolishness, and so we concluded the bargain. Mr. Harrington promised to bring them around at noon, and I'll give him the check. By the way, there was a man in the telephone booth as I came through the outer office. Is anything the matter?"

"Yes, the building is being revived, and for today they have put us on a party wire."

Mr. Brampton nodded, and they proceeded with the business of the day.

Shortly after noon Harrington arrived.

"Good morning," he said. "I trust

RAIN-IN-THE-FACE

The Designing Red Man Who Planned to Destroy Custer's Army, Passes Away.

Aberdeen, S. D., September 26.—Rain-in-the-Face, one of the leading chiefs of the Custer massacre, who is said to have killed General Custer, died at the Standing Rock Reservation September 25, aged 82. The fact became known only today.

Rain-in-the-Face was a pure blooded Sioux and prided himself on this fact. While he was one of the most savage fighting generals Sitting Bull ever had under him in his campaigns, he never entertained much respect for the old chief, always contending, as did many others, that the Bull had a white feather.

As a trouble maker, who would kill on the slightest provocation, Rain-in-the-Face was known in all parts of North and South Dakota and South-eastern Montana, but he did not come into prominence until in the early part of the seventies, when he was arrested by Tom Custer, a brother of the famous General, and brought to the prison at Fort Abraham Lincoln, on the Missouri. The charge against him was that of murder.

After being imprisoned three months he escaped and joined Sitting Bull on the Rosebud and Big Horn Rivers. He left behind him the threat for Tom Custer and the whole Custer family. I will kill you all.

The Crow Indians, scouts and guides of the army, always friendly, warned General Custer and his relatives that Rain-in-the-Face was the most treacherous of the Sioux, and would surely be avenged for his arrest, but the Custers laughed, and said that when they met him again he would get the punishment due him.

Eighteen months after the escape of the Chief, who was then a strong bull about 30 years old, the Custers, with the Seventh Cavalry and Reno and Benton, subordinate officers of the command, rode down the trail of the Yellowstone to find Sitting Bull and his warriors. On July 25, 1876, they found them in a valley of the Big Horn, and the Custer massacre, inspired by Rain-in-the-Face, and instigated by aboriginal hatred, followed.

Deserted by Reno and Benton, not realizing that they had come upon the full camp of the Sioux, Custer's handful of 300 odd men rode into the trap which Chief White Bear said afterward to the Government Commission, Rain-in-the-Face had planned ever since he had known of their coming, and his scouts had been in advance of them for a week before the battle took place.

Rain-in-the-Face led the final grand charge on the little knoll above the mountain stream where the Seventh Cavalry would not surrender. He directed the braves to kill the horses of the troopers. In two hours a handful of Custer's men were left, his brothers were dead, his men were out of ammunition and the last act of the tragedy was at hand. No inrush of the Indians was necessary to destroy the few left. Rain-in-the-Face could keep at a distance and pick them off, as he and his braves did.

Custer, so far as Indian tales can be accepted, finally alone, pistols empty, sword broken, the dead of five companies of the gallant Seventh about him. Spotted Tail, the Bull and White Bear always insisted that he could have surrendered then and would have been treated with honor by his captors, but he did not know the meaning of the word.

Out from the defile came a puff of smoke, the song of a rifle bullet, a flash of flame, and the leader of the Seventh died by the hand of the Chief who had sworn everlasting vengeance.

Are You Engaged?

Engaged people should remember, that, after marriage, many quarrels can be avoided by keeping their digestive organs in good condition with Electric Bitters. S. A. Brown, of Dunnettsville, S. C., says: "For years my wife suffered intensely with dyspepsia, complicated with a torpid liver, until she lost her strength and vigor, and became a mere wreck of her former self. She then tried Electric Bitters, which helped her at once, and finally made her entirely well. She is now strong and healthy." J. H. Williams, the druggist, sells and guarantees them at 50¢ a bottle.

FIVE MILLIONS

Raised for Republican Campaign in 1896, and Nearly as Much in 1904; will be Investigated.

Washington, Sep. 26.—Five Million dollars was raised for the Republican campaign fund in the Presidential election in 1896. "Something less" than $5,000,000 was the Republican national fund of 1904, when Mr. George B. Cortelyou, now Post-master General, was soliciting the contributions.

Pointblank statements that the New York Life contributed $150,000 in the aggregate in three Presidential campaigns and the belief that amounts to a certainty that H. H. Rogers, of the Standard Oil Company, came down handsomely in the 1904 campaign, are sufficient basis for dragging the facts out of the contributors by the Senate Committee.

It can be assumed that Mr. Cortelyou will have to go before the Senate Judiciary Committee and be examined as to the use of the money in the campaign of 1904.

A resolution demanding an investigation already on the Senate calendar, but the revelations that money was used with the amounts will furnish the Democrats of the committee ample ground to force the hand of the committee.

Senator Dewey is one of the prominent members of the committee. The Democrats of the committee are Bacon, Culbertson, Blackburn and Patterson. First Assistant Post-master General Hitchcock was the secretary for Mr. Cortelyou, while the contributions were being made. Mr. Hitchcock was asked about the contributions of the New York Life. He declined to make any statement.

As Mr. Cortelyou's confidential secretary, it is not improbable that Mr. Hitchcock will also be summoned, and also Elmer Dover, who was secretary of the committee in Chicago.

Mr. Cortelyou has never admitted the amount for 1904, but it is believed, on his own statement, that it was near $5,000,000. It would require twenty of the biggest corporations to contribute largely to the 1904 funds, but it was not done out of any love for Mr. Roosevelt personally. One hundred thousand dollars would be a small amount for the Standard Oil Company for one campaign.

It is not contended that corporations, as such, contributed to Mr. Cortelyou's fund. The plan probably was that some individual concerns which were aided and are aided by the tariff, should make the gift personally, and cover up in ways best known to the book keeper.

REMARKABLE WOMAN

Was Operated on Twice a Day For Twenty Years.

Frau Magdalen Gelly, who for twenty years had been known among the medical fraternity as the "Visitation Rabbit," died here on Sunday at the age of sixty-two.

Frau Gelly exercised the curious calling of a subject for anatomical experiments, and her services were in great demand by the most eminent surgeons. She owed her remarkable reputation as a subject for experiments to an abnormal formation and development of her respiratory organs.

Over these she had a marvelous command, controlling them at will and allowing them to be freely operated upon without use of the anaesthetic. Under the operation she described to the assembled surgeons and students the sensations she experienced in her throat, nose, palate, tonsils and other organs under the action of the surgeon's knife.

Frau Gelly reported herself daily at the Clinical laboratory and at the private houses of the most celebrated doctors of Vienna, usually carrying a black reticule, containing all sorts of objects, such as needles, marbles, pins, pencils, etc., intended to be swallowed, or passed through her nostrils or ears for experiments.

As the "Visitation Rabbit" was paid three and sixpence for each sitting, and averaged two daily for twenty years she has left a small fortune, and, having died intestate, the money will probably be inherited by the medical faculty of the university.

Meanwhile great preparations are being made by the whole body of doctors and students to give this remarkable woman an imposing funeral.

DO YOU GET UP WITH A LAME BACK?

Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable.

Almost everybody who reads the newspapers is sure to know of the wonderful cures made by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy.

It is the great medical triumph of the nineteenth century; discovered after years of scientific research by Dr. Kilmer, the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, and is wonderfully successful in promptly curing all cases of kidney trouble, such as backache, bladder, uric acid troubles and Bright's Disease, which is the worst form of kidney trouble.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is not for curing everything but it will cure just the remedy you need. It has been tested in so many ways, in hospital work, in private practice, among the helpless too poor to purchase relief and has proved so successful in every case that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of this paper who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root and how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper and send your address to Dr. Kilmer, 233 West Broadway, New York, N. Y. The regular fifty cent bottles of Swamp-Root, dollar sizes are sold by all good druggists.

Don't make any mistake; remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.
